"THE TAYLOR NURSERY" was designed for the purpose of covering the needs of the sleeping, resting baby from birth to three years and over, and aids the mother in innumerable ways to preserve baby's health as well as her own. It is the only baby bed that helps care for the baby, night and day.

THE SAFETY HOOD absolutely prevents baby falling out or climbing out, and is also a perfect device for holding up a mosquito netting off of baby, out of doors or in. Spiders and mosquitoes can not then reach the baby, who lies safely within. The hood is also splendid to hold a comforter if you want to prevent draughts of cold air.

Notice that "THE TAYLOR NURSERY" is high. It goes over the Mother's bed, and the frame slides underneath, taking up no room.

THERE'S A SANITARY NIGHT BOX at one side of the bed in which to keep clean napkins, powder, and other baby toilet articles. The Night Box has a lid, so that soiled napkins can be closed in tightly, thus avoiding odors and the necessity of mother getting out of bed after she has retired.

PLAYERS' BENCH NOW SAFE

One thing happened at the Athletic Park yesterday that has not occurred since the opening of the series this year, and this point was brought to light by Captain George Burns of the St. Louis College Alumnus team.

The players on the different teams have been forced by the spectators to sit on the ground when they come in from playing, as when they arrive at their bench they find that in most cases their seats have been occupied by spectators, who did not vacate the seats when the players returned from the field. The players, therefore, had to sit on the ground, the spectators not realizing that the ball players needed a comfortable place to sit after their hard work in the field.

Yesterday it was the same way. The Keio players were forced to sit on the ground while some of the spectators filled their seats. To this Captain Burns objected and showed the manager of the park a rule which he wanted carried out before they played ball.

The rule referred to, Rule 21, Section 1, reads as follows:

"All players and substitutes of the side at bat must be seated on their team's bench, except the batsman, baserunners, and such as are legally assigned to coach baserunners. Under no circumstances shall the umpire permit any person except the players and substitutes in uniform and the manager of the team entitled to its exclusive use to be seated on a bench."

There was much objection to this move by the Japanese committee in charge of the Keio team, but it did no good, because Captain Burns stood by the rule and they were carried out after some sharp talk on the part of the police.

The rule should be enforced for the remainder of the season, as it gives the players plenty of room and they feel all the better.

JOHN P. WHITE

COLUMBUS, O., July 1.—When official announcement was made in the convention of the United Mine Workers of America of the defeat of President Tom L. Lewis for reelection by John P. White of Oklahoma, I. A. Lewis declared that on his retirement April 1 he would go back to the manual labor of the mines. All the old officers save Lewis were elected. White defeated Lewis by a majority of 25,743 votes, receiving 98,923 votes. Retiring President Lewis said he hoped to be a delegate to the next convention and was cordially cheered. "It has been my life aim," he said, "to see all of the miners of the American continent united in one large body, and I hope to see a realization of my hopes, and I will pledge my word to you now that because I have been defeated I will not sell my knowledge to friends or representatives of the class which we are fighting for living wages and hours."

President-Elect White said he hoped to reunite the factions in the organization and would try to respect its present policies. A resolution was adopted calling on the convention and members of the union to give moral and financial support to strikes now in progress in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Colorado and Nova Scotia.

The Keio University team can boast of having put two pitchers out of commission during their stay here.

Barney Joy threw the ball in every direction Saturday in the first inning, allowing the Keios to score two runs easily.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 1.—James J. Jeffries is said to be the richest pugilist, either active or retired, in the world today. His friends here, where he has lived all of his life, declare that the big boilermaker has saved and put away at least half a million dollars, fruits of the fighting game, and what his Spring-street saloon has paid him.

Those who know Jeffries realize that another fight with Jack Johnson or any other scrapper is out of the question. The ex-champion does not need the money. Said a friend of his the other day:

"One of the Richest."

"I would not claim that Jim is the richest fighter in the business, but on the other hand there are mighty few punchers who have more of this world's goods stowed away where it will do them the most good. I believe that if it came to a showdown it would be found that few of them, past or present, have put away as much coin as Jim has."

There is Battling Nelson. Some people say that the little Dane has banked in the neighborhood of $100,000. These figures, as I happen to know, are not far wrong. The Battler used more judgment than do most fighters when it came to investing money. Tommy Ryan, who owns a saloon in New York State, is another fairly wealthy fighter, but he is far from being independent and is forced to watch the till for a living.

Burns Did Well.

"Tommy Burns is another who has done well. He is reputed to have stowed away in safe deposit vaults and bank books not far from $150,000. Then Burns has a good brain that should help him buy a little jam for his bread when his fighting days are past. He has a reputation as a lacrosse player, and if he can get a settlement with the street railway company of Seattle, against which he has a damage suit, he should make $10,000 this season playing this latter game."

"No fighter in the game today is piling up money any faster than Wolfgang. He has added about $25,000 to his bank account in the last six months and is worth $50,000 easily, so you see that money can be made in this fighting game, if you go after it right."

Attell Drops the Coin.

"On the other hand, there is the type of fighter like Abe Attell. A lot of folk think Abe is well fixed financially. The fact of the matter is that the little Jew has gambled away most of the money. The cards and the ponies have taken all of a quarter of a million dollars from him. Look at Jack Johnson. He has thrown away a pile of money in the last year, but he still has a chance to add a hundred thousand or so to his nest egg."

"Before the fight with Johnson Jeff was not any too well off for money, and would probably have had to go to work before he died. He made more than $200,000 by the Reno battle and it has more than put him on easy street. Since then he has added greatly to that by investments. Then his saloon, which was not paying so well, strangely enough, took a spurt and since the fight has been coming money for its owner."

Koyama and Takahama, the former playing center and the latter holding down the right-half position, play their positions well. Koyama makes dives for all kinds of hard flies, and manages to gather them in almost every time.

In the fourth inning Saturday Kualili played with Bushnell's curves, sending them to all sides of the park, landing three outside the fence before he sent a dandy over short for a base hit.

Kualili and Hamaahu were not up to their regular form Sunday, when the Saturday game against the P. A. C. and tried hard to score every time he got safely to first.

Rice made some pretty steals in the Saturday game against the P. A. C. and tried hard to score every time he got safely to first.
